

CULTURAL STUDIES: B.A., B.S.

Students in Cultural Studies will explore the ways in which human beings understand, organize, interpret and communicate the world. Students will have the opportunity to consider philosophical, literary, and artistic expressions, and social structures, values, norms, belief systems and historical perspectives across time, place and cultures on issues such as ethics, gender, class and race.

Cultural studies will enhance awareness and understanding of people all over the world. Students will sharpen skills in writing and research and critical reading and thinking, as, together with a faculty mentor, they create a program to meet their own specific needs and goals.

Students pursuing degrees in Cultural Studies design individualized degree plans based on their academic, professional, and/or personal goals and interests. General program guidelines can be found on the "Program Details" tab. Students can work with their academic mentors to choose courses and to identify applicable transfer credit, prior college-level learning, and possible course equivalencies. Working with a mentor and using SUNY Empire's educational planning process, students can develop a specialized concentration in Cultural Studies by following applicable concentration guidelines or by proposing a concentration of their own design.

Cultural studies explore how human beings make sense of our world and the qualities that make us most human. Disciplines such as communications and media, language, literature, philosophy, religion, and writing develop our awareness; our abilities to think, feel, and speak; our appreciation of the values and knowledge underlying these fields; and our sense of ourselves as connected to a greater whole.

All bachelor's degree programs in Cultural Studies should address the following four guidelines. Courses listed below meet each foundation, but this list is not exhaustive. Students should work with their mentor ensure proper course choices.

- Foundation 1: Knowledge of a field or fields, Students will demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the historical foundations, current issues, and major texts in an area of Cultural Studies inquiry.
- Foundation 2: Theoretical knowledge, Students will examine, explain, and apply theories, critical approaches, and methodologies in an area of Cultural Studies inquiry.
- Foundation 3: Diverse perspectives and social responsibility, Students will examine and reflect on diverse cross-cultural perspectives in an area of inquiry (e.g., questions of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, sexual identity, disability, migration, etc.); and consider the responsibilities of members in a just society.
- Foundation 4: Critical thinking, reading, and writing, Students will read, write and evaluate print-based and digital media sources of information critically, i.e., with sustained attention to meaning, presentation, and argument. Build the capacity to identify and describe main ideas, underlying assumptions, and valid conclusions. Create and share information using a range of collaborative technologies; evaluate and cite sources correctly.

Concentration Guidelines

Concentrations in Cultural Studies begin with foundational studies, which prepare the student for more advanced-level work. Advanced-level competency should be developed in those areas which are most relevant to the specific concentration design and to the specific organizing framework. In planning the concentration, consideration should be given both to depth and breadth. Students wishing to pursue individualized concentrations should use the general Cultural Studies degree guidelines as an organizing framework for their degree plans.

Specific guidelines have been developed for concentrations in the following areas:

- Communication and Media (p. 2)
- Literature (p. 3)
- Philosophy (p. 4)

- Religious Studies (p. 6)
- World Languages (p. 7)
- Writing (p. 8)

Students interested in journalism or broadcasting should consult the concentration guidelines for Communication and Media, Writing, or a combination of these. Students interested in English should consult the concentration guidelines for Literature, Writing, Communication and Media, or a combination of these.

If you are interested in an area not listed here, please contact your mentor about designing your own concentration.

Concentration In Communication And Media

Concentrations in communication and media studies should demonstrate knowledge of processes, procedures, methodologies and media involved in interactions between people and within groups, and the dissemination of information and ideas. Twenty-first-century studies in communication and media include an examination of media's impact on culture, democracy and digital identity in an era of rapid technological change and emerging environments as well as practical skills for the 21st century workplace.

Bachelor students should take at least one course for each of the following outcomes.

Field Knowledge (Correlates with the Knowledge of a Field Guideline)

- Learning Outcome: Explain fundamental principles of the field of communication including individual, group, and mass communication or media communication.

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
COMM 1020	Introduction to Communication	4

- Learning Outcome: Interpret media artifacts, which may include examples from print, radio, television, and/or the internet

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
ARTS 1140	Media and Visual Literacy	4

Historical Knowledge and Currency

- Learning Outcome: Trace the development of the history of at least one form of media, including past and future technologies and products.

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Concentration in Literature

The literature concentration is designed to develop students' critical thinking, expository writing and analytic abilities through a study of works of literature written primarily in English. Through a study of texts from different periods, genres and national origins, students will develop a breadth and depth of knowledge and understanding of literature, including authors, themes and literary works. Students are expected to learn about formal aspects of writing as well as the broader cultural and historical contexts of literary texts.

Literature concentrations should address the following:

Foundational Knowledge (Correlates with the Knowledge of a Field Guideline)

- Learning Outcome: demonstrate an understanding of the field of literary studies.

A course which meets this guideline include (but is not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
LITR 1005	Introduction to Literature	4

Theory and Criticism (Correlates with the Theoretical knowledge Guideline)

- Learning Outcomes: demonstrate an understanding of critical approaches to literature. B.A. degree plans should also demonstrate an advanced knowledge of literary theory

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
LITR 2035	Exploring the Disciplines: Literature	2
LITR 3049	Literary Theory	4
LITR 3050	Literary Theory	4

Diversity (Correlates with the Diverse Perspectives and Social Responsibility Guideline)

- Learning Outcome: demonstrate an understanding of issues of diversity in literary studies (African-American literature, Native-American literature, Asian-American literature, Latino-American literature, multicultural writers, women writers, women's and gender studies, queer fiction, immigrant literature, social protest fiction and disability studies)

Courses which contribute to the meeting of this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
LITR 2006	African American Literature: Intro	4
LITR 2040	World Literature: Introductory	4
LITR 3008	African American Literature: Advanced	4
LITR 3015	Cultural Diversity through Literary Art	4
LITR 3030	World Literature: Advanced	4
LITR 3080	Native American Literature	4
LITR 3130	US Multicultural Fiction	4

LITR 3135	U.S. Women's Multicultural Life Writings	4
LITR 3160	Literature of the Holocaust	4
LITR 3071	Immigrant Literature	4

Genres of Literature

- Learning Outcome: demonstrate an understanding of several genres of literature, including poetry, fiction, and drama (may also include knowledge of creative writing, memoir and more experimental techniques)

Courses which contribute to the meeting of this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
LITR 2020	An Introduction to The Modern Short Story	4
LITR 2030	Children's Literature: Introductory	3-4
LITR 2050	Science Fiction & the Human Dynamic: Introduction	4
LITR 3010	Children's Literature: Advanced	4
LITR 3022	Ekphrasis Poetry	4

LITR 3120	The Popular Romance Novel	4
LITR 3127	The Graphic Novel	4
LITR 3145	Young Adult Literature	4
LITR 3207	American Poetry	3

Literary Periods

- Learning Outcome: demonstrate an understanding of literary periods (may include knowledge of early/late British literature and/or/early/late American literature; it may include comparative literature from other literatures in English)

Courses which contribute to the meeting of this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
LITR 2010	American Literature to 1865	4
LITR 2015	American Literature 1865-Present	4
LITR 3040	Jane Austen	4
LITR 3075	Literature & the Culture of the Vampire	4
LITR 3095	Shakespeare	4
LITR 3141	Modern American Literature	4
LITR 3192	20th Century American Literature	3

Depth (Applies only to B.A. degree plans)

- Learning Outcome: demonstrate advanced knowledge of one or more major authors, literary movements, themes, or genres

Courses which meet this guideline include any appropriate advanced-level literature course.

Concentration In Philosophy

Existing both as an academic discipline in its own right and as the activity of philosophical inquiry (or "philosophizing") that is integral to numerous other academic areas (political theory, literary theory, fine arts, comparative religion, sociology of scientific knowledge, linguistics, etc.), philosophy is a cornerstone of the humanities. A concentration in philosophy can be organized in many different ways and should therefore reflect the student's particular learning goals. Note that students who are considering the pursuit of a graduate degree in the actual discipline of philosophy should research the expectations of graduate programs offering such a degree and plan their concentration accordingly.

Philosophy concentrations at both the Associates and Bachelor's level should address the following:

Ethics

- Learning Outcome: Articulate philosophical questions, perspectives, and arguments in:
- ethics using vocabulary, concepts, and methods deriving from the discipline of
- philosophy and/or other academic areas with significant philosophical components.

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
PHIL 2005	Introduction to Philosophy	4
PHIL 2020	Introduction to Ethics	4

Courses which contribute to the meeting of this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
CUST 2055	The Pursuit of Happiness in American History	4

Politics

- Learning Outcome: Articulate philosophical questions, perspectives, and arguments in politics using vocabulary, concepts, and methods deriving from the discipline of philosophy and/or other academic areas with significant philosophical components.

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits

POLI 3035	Theorizing Democracy: Equity, Inclusion, and Social Justice	4

Metaphysics (Questions of "Reality")

- Learning Outcome: Articulate philosophical questions, perspectives, and arguments in metaphysics using vocabulary, concepts, and methods deriving from the discipline of philosophy and/or other academic areas with significant philosophical components.

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
PHIL 2005	Introduction to Philosophy	4

Epistemology (Questions of "Knowing")

- Learning Outcome: Articulate philosophical questions, perspectives, and arguments in epistemology using vocabulary, concepts, and methods deriving from the discipline of philosophy and/or other academic areas with significant philosophical components.

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
PHIL 2005	Introduction to Philosophy	4

Logic and Reasoning

- Learning Outcome: Articulate philosophical questions, perspectives, and arguments in logic and reasoning using vocabulary, concepts, and methods deriving from the discipline of philosophy and/or other academic areas with significant philosophical components.

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
PHIL 2005	Introduction to Philosophy	4
CUST 2030	Introduction to Critical Thinking	2

Philosophy concentrations at the Bachelor's level should also address the following:

Two (or more) specialized areas of advanced-level philosophical inquiry. Examples of such areas include but are not limited to social and cultural theory (e.g., social justice, queer theory, feminist theory), philosophy of art (aesthetics), literary theory, environmental ethics, political philosophy/theory, philosophy of religion, African philosophy, East Asian philosophy, history of Western philosophy, philosophy of language, and logic.

- Learning Outcome: Articulate at an advanced-level philosophical questions, perspectives, and arguments in at least two specialized areas using vocabulary, concepts, and methods deriving from the discipline of philosophy and/or other academic areas with significant philosophical components.

Courses that contribute to the meeting of this guideline include (to fully meet the guideline, two or more areas need to be addressed):

Concentration In Religious Studies

Religious stories and devotional behaviors are a core part of most human societies. Throughout time, religions and their varying communities and traditions of interpretation have played vital roles in culturally and politically shaping and reshaping our lives and world. To elucidate this complex of personal, social and historical interconnections requires multiple perspectives and the consideration of diverse religious texts, beliefs and practices.

Although individuals may find religious studies useful in the exploration of their personal beliefs, a degree in Cultural Studies with a concentration in Religious Studies shall also adopt a pluralistic perspective that examines multiple schools of religious thought, including critiques of religion itself, reflecting the tacit understanding that no tradition has exclusive access to religious truth, however that is defined.

Religious Studies concentrations at both the Associates and Bachelor's level should address the following:

Theories that Define Religion

- Learning outcome: Evaluate theories that define the phenomenon of religion by analyzing recurring religious themes, patterns, structures, language and practices; identifying and analyzing core components such as deity, cosmogony, theodicy and ethics; and critically examining the significance of sacred texts, scriptures, traditions, rituals and devotional practices.

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
RELI 2025	Introduction to Religious Studies	4

Religious Traditions

- Learning outcome: Investigate traditions from at least two of the following categories: religions of "The Book" (Judaism, Christianity, Islam) scriptural Asian religions (Hinduism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Daoism) indigenous Asian religions (Shintoism, Bonism, Shamanism) North and/or South American native religions, African and/or African diaspora religions.

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
RELI 3998	Individualized Studies in RELI	2-8
HIST 1080	History of World Religions	4

A course that partially meets this guideline include (to fully meet this guideline at least two of these areas must be addressed):

Concentration In World Languages

Studies in world languages (e.g., ASL, French, Italian, Spanish, etc.) aim to foster cross-national and cross-cultural understanding and to facilitate the development of skills associated with language acquisition, such as speaking, writing, reading and listening. These skills are particularly important in the 21st century, when local and world cultures are increasingly intertwined. Indeed, linguistic and cultural competency opens numerous opportunities to experience and contribute to globalization and enhances learners' professional and personal growth.

World Languages concentrations should address the following general guidelines:

Language Skills

- Learning Outcome: demonstrate the ability to use resources in the target language and to access cultural information

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
SPAN 3015	Advanced Spanish: Language & Culture	4

Concentration In WritingExpository Writing

Concentrations in expository writing generally reflect a competency-based program that enables students to become more effective writers of expository prose. It is a program of studies for students who have mastered:

- Basic lower-division writing skills, including correct use of grammar, diction, punctuation, sentence and paragraph structures.
- Clarity, coherence and concreteness in the development of thought.

Well-developed concentrations in expository writing should address the following guidelines:

Theory

- Learning Outcome: demonstrate an understanding of at least one of rhetoric, grammar, logic, style, or linguistics

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
COMW 2005	Effective Academic Writing	2,3
COMW 2020	Research Writing	4
COMW 2025	Arguments in Academic Writing	2
COMW 3006	Research Writing: Advanced	3-4

History

- Learning Outcome: demonstrate an understanding of the development of the English language either through linguistic or literary studies

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits

While much of the work in the concentration should include practice in expository writing, the degree program could reflect a broad range of cultural studies in other liberal arts and sciences, including studies that will give students the opportunity to write in subject areas in the humanities and social sciences.

Creative Writing

Concentrations in creative writing generally include studies that will focus on the form, structure and uses of language as it is applied to fiction, poetry or drama. For disciplinary concentrations in creative writing, major emphasis will be placed on the practice of writing with supporting attention to theoretical and historical studies.

Creative writing is a competency-based concentration which should address:

Theory

- Learning Outcome: demonstrate an understanding of critical theory, particularly in the student's genre of primary interest

Courses which meet this guideline include (but are not limited to):

Code	Title	Credits
